

Abrahamic Traditions

Saturdays, April 4 – April 25

2 p.m. – 4 p.m.

Course Schedule:

April 4:
Monotheism: The History and Power of an Idea

April 11:
Reading the Revealed
Word: Tanakh, New Testament, and Qur'an

April 18:
War and Peace in the Name of God

April 25:
Climate Change and the Ethics of Environmental Responsibility

Tuition:
$200
$170 (Mason Alumni)

George Mason
University, Fairfax
Campus

Despite historical and contemporary conflicts and challenges, the three Abrahamic monotheisms have longstanding ethical traditions that can offer inspiration and guidance for addressing the pressing issues of our time.

This four-week course will examine the foundational histories, texts and ethical traditions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, and their significance for approaches to two contemporary ethical challenges: war and conflict resolution and the environmental crisis. Discussion will be informative and engaging, with leading experts in the history of religion. Participants will have the opportunity to read, compare and discuss key portions of each religion's scriptural tradition.

For more information and to register visit:
<http://to.gmu.edu/abrahamictraditions>

