Do you have an adolescent or young adult with Anorexia Nervosa?

Adolescents and young adults ages 10 to 21 with Anorexia Nervosa and their families are invited to participate in a Family-Based Treatment (FBT) research study through George Mason University Center for Psychological Services. By participating in this study, participants receive FBT, an evidence-based treatment, at a reduced rate, as well as up to $120 upon completion of the study.

Who can participate?

- Adolescents or young adults ages 10-21
- Current diagnosis of anorexia nervosa (can speak with provider to discuss symptoms and qualification for the study)
- Living with at least one parent or guardian
- Medically stable for outpatient treatment

To receive more information:
Please contact Catherine Byrne at cbyrne7@gmu.edu or call 630-926-5070