

Global Affairs students!! Are you passionate about film and television and interested in learning about the fabulous productions from Latin America? Please consider FRLN 331-003: Spanish-language Film & Television (in translation), taught by Professor Lisa Rabin on Thursdays 4:30-7:10 fall 2019.

In this course, we will approach Latin American film and television as both art forms and industrial products. We will also focus on the role that genres like the revolutionary film and the telenovela have played in constructing national and global identities in the 20th and 21st centuries. The course is conducted in English and fulfills a Mason Core requirement in Global Understanding. Questions? Please feel free to contact Professor Rabin at lrabin@gmu.edu.
